

FRICK PREDICTS HUGHES VICTORY; STRONG IN THE WEST

Steel Magnate Also Expects War to Keep This Country Prosperous.

WILL LAST MORE THAN A YEAR

U. S. Steel at 107, Record Price, a Good Investment, He Declares, and Cheap; Fears Labor Agitation and Wants no More Congress Settlements

Special to The Courier. PITTSBURGH, Sept. 15.—H. C. Frick paid a hasty visit to Pittsburgh yesterday, and as usual, gave out an interesting interview. He predicted the election of Mr. Hughes, was outspoken in his praise of the Republican nominee, and declared his private advice indicates the candidate is much stronger in the West than is generally understood.

Referring to the prosperity of the country at this time, Mr. Frick predicted that it would continue, although admitting that it is dependent upon the war. He added that, even so, there is no danger of an immediate cessation of the good times.

The only danger he sees in the near future is the possibility of more labor trouble.

"Conditions will continue good. I am sure—unless we have too much labor agitation."

When it was suggested that much of the agitation had been settled, he answered:

"Yes, but we do not wish Congress to settle any more of it."

Mr. Frick said that the railroad crisis is apparently at an end. "Hughes," he added, "the Democratic bill is not altogether improbable."

So confident is Mr. Frick of the continuance of prosperity that he declared United States Steel stock, at the war price of 107, its record high mark, is cheap and a very good investment. He did not advise buying for speculation.

This is partly true, he said, because the great domestic demand for steel is a healthy sign. He acquiesced in the prediction of "astish" prosperity made by President J. A. Farrell of the Steel Corporation in his address at Duquesne.

Mr. Frick was very outspoken in his praise of Mr. Hughes and made predictions of his election. He had private advice, he said, that the Republican candidate had been even more successful in the west than generally understood. The results in Maine, he said, were immensely gratifying and he thought the betting on Hughes was "another straw" that located the wind. He specifically pointed out that it was not the Democrats, but the war, which brought good times to this country.

MAY GO TO COAST

Colonel Roosevelt's Campaign Tour is Being Mapped Out.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—In making plans for Theodore Roosevelt's western campaign trip in support of Charles E. Hughes, alternative itineraries are being considered. One of them would carry the Colonel to San Francisco, with speeches at Chicago, Denver and other cities on the way. The other contemplates a tour to the Middle States with a stop into the Northwest and a return by the way of Missouri and Kentucky.

Colonel Roosevelt, it was learned today, told Chairman Wilcox of the Republican national committee he was willing to go to California if necessary and it is said that this offer probably will be accepted.

It has not yet been determined how many speeches the Colonel will make. Appeals for his presence in many parts of the country are being received at Republican headquarters.

HUGHES ODDS WIDEN

No Takers in Wall Street on Offer of $5,000 to 2 to 1.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—In the offices of election betting on the World street curb and in Stock Exchange offices the odds on Hughes widened to 2 to 1, but so far as could be learned no bets were recorded by any of the commission men at that or any other odds.

Edward McQuade, one of the commission men on the curb, said that he had been trying all day to put all or any part of $5,000 on Hughes at 2 to 1, but had not been able to get a taker. A member of the Stock Exchange said he had a customer willing to put a large sum at the same odds, but had heard of no Wilson money.

Inspectors, Not Sealers. The name "Inspector of Weights and Measures" was adopted by those officials, in convention at Harrisburg this week, "inspector" taking the place of the term "sealer," which has been used heretofore.

Aged Minister Dies. Rev. Arthur Edie Fulton, the oldest member of the Allegheny conference of the United Brethren Church, died yesterday morning at his home at Windber.

GRAND RALLY OF G. O. P. IS PLANNED

State Chairman Crow Plans to Call Republican Committee Together When Hughes Visits.

Chairman William E. Crow of the Republican state committee yesterday notified William H. Coleman, chairman of the Republican county committee of Allegheny that he is considering the advisability of convening the state committee in Pittsburgh on the afternoon of September 27, the day Charles E. Hughes, the Republican presidential nominee, is to make his speech in this city.

If Mr. Crow carries out his plan it will mean a Republican state platform will be adopted here and the Pennsylvania campaign formally opened with speeches by Pittsburger C. K. King, nominee for United States senator; Charles A. Snyder, nominee for auditor general; Harmon M. Kephart, nominee for state treasurer, and the four nominees for congressional seats. It will bring together leading Republicans from all parts of Pennsylvania who will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Hughes deliver his night address. Following the Pittsburgh opening the state candidates are expected to start on a four weeks' tour through Pennsylvania.

Two years ago Mr. Crow convened the state committee there for the adoption of the platform and the opening of the state campaign. It was suggested some time ago that he follow the same program for this year. Several weeks ago he notified former Lieutenant Governor Walter Lytle he would be named as chairman of the platform committee. So far he has not selected the other members, but it is expected this will be done at once and the declaration of state principles of the party put in form.

SOME QUEER SPEECHES

Democrats Show Need of Census as They Open State Campaign.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—The lid was flung off the Democratic campaign in Pennsylvania here yesterday by a flood of oratory in which the Democratic state candidates, party leaders and a member of President Wilson's Cabinet indicated the lines upon which they propose to wage their fight.

Appearing first to the labor vote and the Progressives, they "pointed with pride" to the accomplishment of the Wilson administration, bitterly denounced the Republican organization and Governor Daughugh and mildly roasted Charles Evans Hughes, the G. O. P. standard bearer.

The effort to marshal the Progressives behind the donkey forces took curious turns at the first performance of the 1916 spellbinders. One orator would plead fervently with the Progressives and extol their sincerity and intelligence, only to have the next speaker buffet the Progressives off the pedestal and rough house them about the stage at the Board of Trade, where the Democratic state committee met and its candidates were formally notified of their nomination.

BREAD SALE REGULATION.

Sealers of Weights and Measures Take Action.

Special to The Courier. HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—The State convention of sealers of weights and measures yesterday adopted resolutions favoring legislation to give them authority to regulate the sale of bread in Pennsylvania.

James Sweeney called attention to reports about increases of the retail price of bread, and suggested legislation as the state is operating under a law passed in 1789.

Confidence People Kept Out of Somerset but Later Folks Not Under Gun.

Another odd result of the various elaborations of the state's quarantine against infantile paralysis is furnished in Somerset county where Confidence people are prohibited from going to the county seat yet Somerset folk go to and from Confidence with impunity.

The Confidence residents say it is a poor rule that won't work both ways. Somerset persons say the same thing.

BIG CROWD GOOD NATURED DESPITE THE HEAVY RAIN

Remains at Dawson Driving Park While Exhibitions are Run.

BAND GIVES A GOOD CONCERT

Helps While Away the Time for Record Crowd at the Fair; Heavy 'Track' Puts an End to Racing Program; Various Exhibits Well Patronized.

There were no races at the Dawson Fair today and it was not possible to tell whether the track would be in condition for racing tomorrow. Inquiry at the secretary's office elicited the information that they would not know whether the track would be in shape for Saturday before 4 o'clock this afternoon.

If no more rain fell, it was stated, every effort to put the track in shape tomorrow would be made. No races could be held today, it was stated. It had been planned to hold four harness races this afternoon, starting the first at 1 o'clock. Weather and track permitting, a big program will be pulled off tomorrow. The other attractions of the fair will be open.

Yesterday was the big day at the Dawson Fair. Despite the bad weather, the turnout was large, being, in fact, a record attendance. The early threats of rain were carried out when a light sprinkle began about noon. No one minded this, but a hard shower at 2 o'clock drove the people to shelter. From that time on the day was spoiled.

Most of those in attendance at the grandstand throughout the afternoon, hoping that the races would be run off. Others left early, but the exodus was comparatively small until about 6 o'clock, when everybody went home.

The officials at the gates estimate that there were between 10,000 and 12,000 people on the grounds yesterday. At least 500 automobiles were parked in the center field.

Immediately after the rain began, the grandstand was opened and people began filing in. When the hard shower came everyone rushed madly for shelter. Throngs congregated under the grandstand, where it was quite dry. Others entered the shows on the midway and the fair buildings. Most people, however, paid their money and entered the grandstand, which was soon crowded to overflowing.

Shortly after 2 o'clock Judge R. E. Biggs announced that the running race would be held immediately and that the harness races would be run off later in the afternoon if weather conditions permitted. The crowd showed no disposition to leave the grandstand after the dash was finished, but waited on to see any races that might be staged.

It was a good natured crowd, taking the disappointment cheerfully and ready for fun at all times. It was a brilliant crowd, too, with many well known people present. Society was in force, the women's bright colored costumes making the stand present a striking picture.

When the sun came out there was a cheer. The judges figured that if a number of automobiles would drive around the track, it would pack the earth and might make races possible. Judge Biggs announced that cars would be allowed to drive around, as long as there were no chassis used on the tires. Some of the machines had a hard time getting out of the parking place because of the jam of cars there, but soon a dozen or more were speeding around the track, giving the appearance of an automobile speedway, rather than a horse racing track.

The crowd greeted the first automobile to go around with cheers and its skidding caused many laughs. There were more cheers when the first Ford passed the stand; when the first woman driver made the circuit; when the first big truck was called into service, and when a motorcycle lent its aid. But there was much more applause when the first horse came on to the track.

The Connellsville Military Band men did much to make the long wait endurable. Seated in the stand at the racing track, they played a long program with a snap and vigor that gained them applause. Miss Eleanor Savage appeared as soloist with the band, singing the more popular airs of the day.

After the first heat of the special harness race had been run and it was seen that the big races could not be staged, the crowd began to leave. Many, however, remained until all three heats had been run, and then the immense crowd departed from the park. The thousands of people and the hundreds of automobiles leaving the park at the same time caused so much confusion that a special traffic policeman was pressed into service at the gate to the grounds. James Dull of Connellsville, performed this duty.

At the railroad and trolley stations the crowd was just as great.

All interest yesterday afternoon centered in the postponed races. In the morning, however, there were other attractions for the visitors. The carnival shows did a record business and the exhibition buildings were continued on Page Two.

MAN IS KILLED MOVING A SHED

George Wagner, Well Known in Bullskin Township, is Victim of Unusual Accident.

Another member of the Wagner family of Bullskin township, met a tragic death yesterday afternoon when the father, George Wagner, 40 years old, was instantly killed while changing the location of a frame coal shed on his property, near the Moore Memorial Church. The building, which was about 14 feet square had been propped up and collapsed while Mr. Wagner was digging underneath it. His wife witnessed the accident, and although neighbors hurriedly removed the wreckage the body of Mr. Wagner was lifeless when taken from beneath the debris. He was struck by the corner of the building, suffering a crushed skull and a broken neck. The body was removed to the Wagner home and funeral director J. E. Sims was summoned and prepared it for burial. Mr. Wagner was a miner.

Deceased was born at Rockwood and later moved to Broomfield. He married Miss Mollie Wilson, a daughter of John Wilson. In addition to his widow he is survived by nine children as follows: Olive, William, Albert, Peter, Margaret, Irene, John, Ella and a baby girl about a year old. Mr. Wagner was a charter member of Friendship Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of Mayer, and was widely known throughout Bullskin township. Funeral tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house and at 3 o'clock from the Mount Olive Church. Rev. Long will officiate. Interment in Mount Olive cemetery.

Arthur Wagner, 17 years old, a son, was one of the four young men who lost their lives last March when the roof of a Baltimore & Ohio hotel collapsed while Loren Jones of the Bob Jones party was conducting a noonday meeting at the Baltimore & Ohio shops.

SAFETY MEETING

General Public Will Hear Talks by Experts Tonight.

All persons interested in safety, accident or fire prevention and kindred matters are invited to the safety meeting in the high school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock this evening when C. B. Scott and S. G. Reed, of the Chicago Bureau of Safety, will deliver addresses on "Safety." These men are devoting their entire time to accident prevention and they have been brought to Connellsville by the West Penn in an effort to emphasize the necessity of safety in the home.

"It is hard to make people think of safety," said a West Penn official "today," "unless their attention is brought to it by an accident in which they are the victims, or unless relatives or close friends are hurt. At the same time we are doing our best to keep the subject in mind and we hope to have a large attendance at the meeting tonight."

Messrs. Scott and Reed have spoken at various meetings of West Penn men recently and some months ago they organized safety units in all departments of the company.

BIG STRIKE THREATENS

Officials Working Hard to Prevent Huge Walkout in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Although union leaders have virtually abandoned hope and Mayor Mitchell and the Public Service Commission may bring about an amicable adjustment of the differences between the striking street railway men and their employers, the belief was strong in official circles that some action would be taken in the next 24 hours to avert the threatened sympathetic strike of 70,000 trade unionists.

The central federated union of Manhattan will hold a special meeting to consider the advisability of joining in a strike that "will astound New York."

The Brooklyn Central Labor Union, comprising 85 local unions, has already voted in favor of such a strike. During the night violence broke out anew. From midnight until early today, Sixth and Ninth avenue elevated trains were bombarded with bricks, stones and other missiles. One guard was injured.

Service on the subway and elevated lines continues normal but the surface cars are hampered.

A brilliant victory for the Serbians over the Bulgarians was scored after a battle lasting several days west of Lake Ostrovo, near the western end of the fighting front.

The British success was effected west of the Vardar, near the center of the Entente front, where they captured important positions. The lines forced by the French were to the east of the Vardar. The Bulgarians captured 25 cannon and a large number of prisoners as yet uncounted.

The Bulgarians after their defeat, says the statement, retired for a distance of 12 miles.

Proceeding this morning extensive offensive movement the British last night drove forward southeast of Thiepval and captured about 1,000 yards of German trenches, including a strongly fortified position.

PRIEST ARRAIGNED; GIRL HIS ACCUSER

Rev. Stephen Ulrich is Defendant in Serious Charges Made by Housekeeper's Daughter.

Special to The Courier. UNIONTOWN, Sept. 15.—Mary Catherine Zbonja, 16 years old and pretty, on the witness stand before Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen, today accused Rev. Stephen Ulrich, pastor of a Slavish church in Connellsville, of making several attempts to have improper relations with her. The girl appeared as the prosecutrix against Rev. Ulrich today, charging him with assault and battery with intent.

The girl testified that she was born in Perth Amboy, N. J. Her father died when she was two weeks old and she and her mother went to Europe when she was an infant. She remained there nine years, she testified. She was brought back by Rev. Ulrich, she testified, and was placed in St. Michael's Orphan Asylum at Hopewell, N. J., where she remained for two years. Her mother has been housekeeper for Rev. Ulrich for almost eight years, and when she was 12 years old, she testified, she was taken to Leechburg by her mother to live at Rev. Ulrich's house. She testified that she was subject to indignities from him from that time.

They lived in Leechburg two years, the girl testified, and in 1915 came to Connellsville.

After one attempt, the girl said, she took $50 from her mother's pocket-book to buy a railroad ticket and clothes and went to Leechburg. She said that she stayed there at the home of Mrs. Ziccone, and consulted an attorney there. After staying at the Ziccone home a week, she said, her mother came after her, threatening her arrest on an incorrigibility charge if she did not return home. She said that she went back to Connellsville with her, staying there a day. She said that Rev. Ulrich again made advances toward her. She testified that she slept a night in the church basement, and the next day went to Mr. Moduchusky, the church organist, told him her story and again went to Leechburg. She said that she was brought to Uniontown by Attorney Roberts, where she made the information against Rev. Ulrich before Justice of the Peace Moorhead.

The priest's defense, it is said, will be that he is the victim of a plot. A faction of the church, headed by the organist, is trying out him, he claims. William Taylor entered a plea of guilty before Judge Van Swearingen on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated. He was sentenced to pay the costs and $100 fine, the minimum sentence.

Ed Smith and Clifford Corey, negroes of Connellsville, entered pleas of guilty to carrying concealed weapons and were sentenced to pay the costs, $75 fine and each serve nine months in the county jail.

Attorney Edward D. Brown, representing William Campbell, of Connellsville, convicted yesterday of assault and battery with intent to rob and robbery, filed a motion for a new trial. He was given 10 days in which to file his reasons. Campbell was found guilty of robbing Martin Boldar on June 21 of $23.

On motions of Attorneys L. B. Brownfield and H. S. Dumbauld, the injunction hearing of Mrs. Isabelle Long against the West Penn Interurban Railway Company, which was to have been heard today, was continued until next Friday.

A story that will strike motorists dumb with horror comes from McKeesport where the driver of an oil firm dumped 100 gallons of perfectly good gasoline into the sewer, thinking he was pouring it into the tank of a doctor's private garage. FIGHTING TENTH PLANS RECEPTION FOR HOMECOMERS

Big Jollification Promised When Third Battalion Returns.

HAVE BEEN IN BIG BEND LANDS

Test Hike and Inspection is Held to Determine Amount of Equipment Men Can Carry on March Without Being Over Burdened; Camp Notes.

By G. R. Herwick, Staff Correspondent. CAMP STEWART, El Paso, Tex., Sept. 11.—There are big delays in store for the Fighting Tenth this week. The Third Battalion will return Wednesday or Thursday and there sure promises to be some excitement. The boys are already making preparations for the reception on their return. The entire regiment headed by the band will be out to extend their welcome. All the companies with the exception of one are now at Marathon and just as soon as they are all in they will board the train for Camp Stewart.

It is only a matter of eight or ten hours ride on the train from that point. From reports of the boys in that district they certainly will be glad to get back, too. They have undergone considerable hardship in the matter of food and clothing, owing to the condition of the roads at that place. Jimmy Darr, Dewey Miller, Carl Snair, Charles McCormick, William Martray, William Rodgers, Clifton Crowley and Walter Lazelle, all of Connellsville, are with the hospital detachment in that district and the boys of the hospital corps are planning a big reception for them.

Charles Smith, better known as "Buck," cook for the hospital corps, was granted his discharge and will leave for Fort du Pont, Delaware, this evening to be mustered out. Owing to Mount Gretna being closed up it is necessary for those being mustered out to go to Fort du Pont. While the boys were sorry to see him leave they all envied him. "Buck" will be greatly missed by the Connellsville boys.

The Tenth Regiment is now down to a routine of daily maneuvers and regimental drills. Saturday was field inspection day. The regiment was marched out in full field equipment and after a short hike the packs were unslung and the shelter tents pitched and general inspection held. Colonel Coulter delivered a lecture to the boys and told them the object was to find out just how much equipment a man could carry without hardship and with the man's comfort as the object. He said the men should carry all the small things necessary for their comfort. The pack was supposed to contain a shelter tent half, rubber porch, blanket, tent pole and pans, a suit of underclothes, two pairs of socks, pair of shoe strings, foot powder, towel, soap, tooth brush and powder and comb and brush, with needles and thread for mending purposes. These packs are carried in a roll in addition to the other equipment of the men and by the time they have marched several miles become pretty burdensome. The inspection was very satisfactory in every respect.

All companies of the Tenth have been qualifying on the rifle range the past week and expect to have all men qualified by the 15th of September, the time set for the completion of the shooting. There have been some good shots developed during the stay here, particularly among Company D men. Montgomery Diltworth has now been installed as second lieutenant of Company D and is acclimating himself to his new duties. Diltworth is quite popular among the men and gives promise of making a valuable addition to the company.

Major General Clements gave the boys an interesting talk at the show of the Third Regiment Saturday night. The general was a visitor and when he made his appearance he was greeted with three hearty cheers by all present and asked to make a speech. The general responded and said when the Seventh Division returned it would be the most competent and complete organization in the country. He said that there would be three regiments of artillery and a full regiment of engineers. He said the guns were on the way for the artillery. Colonel Coulter was also present and responded with a short talk. The show was a success in every way. There was no show in the Tenth Wednesday night owing to the absence on a furlough of Major Joe Thompson, who is the promoter of these entertainments. Major Thompson is expected back today.

Homer Moser, first sergeant of the hospital corps, had a nightmare the other night and got up about 11 o'clock and thought it was morning. It was a bright moonlight night and "Monk" thought it was morning and proceeded to try to wake everybody up. He heard taps sounded and thought it was reveille. He could not be convinced for some time that it was only 11 o'clock.

There are many rumors afloat just now about the return of the Pennsylvania troops the first of October. Although there is nothing definite it is said the railroads are making room for many Pennsylvania coaches.

Only Two Recruits.

HE JUST CAN'T ELUDE FRIENDS

M. J. Burke of Smithton, on Honey-moon, Finds Them All Over New York.

A New York correspondent of a Pittsburgh newspaper writes the following sketch on the futile efforts of M. J. Burke of Smithton to lose himself in New York city:

"If anyone in the United States is lonely and wants to meet his friends, let him get married and come to New York on his honeymoon. That is what M. J. Burke of Smithton, Pa., who is stopping at the Biltmore Hotel, said yesterday. After marrying Miss Julia K. Clarke in Jeannette, a few days ago, Mr. Burke began to seek a quiet place for a honeymoon—a place where he could avoid meeting anyone he knew. He tried several small towns en route to New York city, and in each one he met some one. When he reached this city he said he thought that at last he could find a haven in the Biltmore.

"A few hours after their arrival Mrs. Burke asked one of the assistant managers to page her husband. 'What is the name?' she was asked. 'Burke,' she said. 'Where does he come from?' 'Smithton, Pa., and his initials are M. J.," replied Mrs. Burke. 'Well, by gosh, he's my cousin,' said the assistant manager."

HONORS FOR TURNEY

Two thousand employees of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad shops at Huntington, W. Va., laid off work and paraded to celebrate the marriage of R. W. Turney, 61 years old, general foreman of the machine shops at Huntington, and Miss Emma M. Lauderback, a sister of Mr. Turney's former wife.

Mr. Turney learned the machinist trade at the old National Locomotive Works here and is well known among railroad men of Connellsville and vicinity. He was a star baseball player on the old Young team. The celebration was the most unique ever held at Huntington.

STRAW HATS GO

Today is the Day to Blossom Forth With Fall Headgear.

Straw hats go into the discard—or the hatbox—today, according to rules. September 15, from time immemorial, has been designated as the date upon which the light and comfortable summer coverings are replaced by the warmer and more cumbersome derby or felt hats. Weather conditions have nothing to do with it. If the weather is unusually nice, a dispensation from somebody is received permitting the straws to be worn until the 26th. This is unlikely this year. Anyway, the clothing stores have taken winter hats to sell to men and the dealers have to live, so straw hats must go.

Wilson's Sister Slaking. LONG BRANCH, Sept. 13.—President Wilson received word today that his sister, Mrs. Anna Howe, who is ill at New London, Conn., was sinking rapidly. Tentative plans were made immediately for his departure for New London later today.

Kelly Now a Democrat. HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—The Democratic state executive committee last night substituted M. Clyde Kelly of North Braddock for C. H. Arnold as Democratic candidate for Congress in the Thirtieth district.

touches of the sort that we've and blend comedy and pathos. Ann Pennington is fortunate in the role that has been provided for her introduction on the screen and there can be no question that by her interpretation she makes it in. In the role of Susie Miss Pennington has a most happy medium and she has scored a complete success. Standing out in support are two notable bits of Susie prim to be sure but naturally no above all human likeable even in the spite of their severe cast of countenance. Among others

Pennington are Leo Delaney and William Courtleigh Jr. The latter is seen as the ambler but music essential for Miss Pennington's and Susie Snowflake is a charming picture and gives Miss Pennington an opportunity to do one of her celebrated stunts which have made her the idol of the musical comedy world. ## STEEL LABOR TROUBLES IMPEND Struggle for an 8-Hour Day in the Industry Is Expected to Come Before End of the Year.

Those well posted as to labor matters express the opinion, says the Pittsburgh correspondent of The American Metal Market, since the Congressional eight-hour legislation, that before the end of the year there will be a great strike in the steel industry for an eight-hour day. The trouble is expected to break out first in the Youngstown district. In times like these labor disputes settled do not stay settled. The serious strike early in the year occurred at a time when the mills were considering making a voluntary advance in wages, and a general advance did occur February 1. Without any serious agitation there was another general wage advance May 1, only three months later. It is now four months and more since the last wage advance.

The strike that is regarded as being threatened, however, would not be in essence a strike for higher wages. Such a matter might be compounded, but to shorten the hours of labor and maintain steel production would be physically impossible, as there are not enough men. The element that enters into the matter in the case of some industries, of the men spending up and doing more per hour, so that they can accomplish their day's work in a shorter time, does not enter to any extent in the case of blast furnace and steel mill labor. There is no opportunity for the men to speed up. They have to wait on the machinery, and in the case of the 12-hour men there are long waits whereby the actual working time is figured to be less than 10 hours. To shorten the day would be to decrease in equal ratio the amount of service performed, and proportionately more men would be required to maintain operations. The additional men could not be secured, as the works are already short.

EQUIPMENT ORDERS

Fallen Off Considerable But Would Pickup If Deliveries Could be Had.

Orders for railroad equipment during the last month or two have fallen off considerably, but the railroads are no less desirous of obtaining new cars. They are fairly well supplied with locomotives, it appears, but if they could obtain early deliveries of equipment, their orders for cars would lend a strong stimulus to the market. It is said that the car-building companies continue to be hampered by inability of the steel makers to furnish car material, this being especially true for orders demanding all-steel equipment, but it is also a fact regarding orders demanding a particular kind of steel.

Specifications for wooden cars recently were the result of the crowded condition of the steel trade and inability to obtain material from the steel mills, as well as a consequence of the advance in price of that material. Railroads found that cars could be built immediately if wood alone was required for such parts as siding, and they drew their specifications accordingly.

There is no belief that railroads will return to a general use of wooden freight cars, but that when the extraordinary conditions of the steel trade are no more the use of steel as before in car building will be resumed.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice.—It will be confidential.

"See How Well My Boy Is Since Taking Father John's Medicine."

I decided to give Father John's Medicine a trial and was soon convinced that it was helping him very much. Now look at his photo and see how healthy he is." (Signed) Mrs. K. J. Jacques, 88 Whittenton St., Canton, Mass.

For a tissue builder to make new flesh and strength for young and old nothing equals Father John's Medicine which is pure and wholesome and contains no drugs from alcohol or dangerous poisons.—Adv.

We put it up to Hundreds of Dentists

Long before SENRECO was offered to you we submitted it to hundreds of dentists, requesting that they put it to every test. Told them that we believed Senreco to be an unusually good dentifrice, especially as to its cleansing qualities and its remedial action on sore, soft, bleeding gums; in the treatment of Pyorrhea, etc. Submitted the formula and asked them their opinion. They tested Senreco from every angle, some going even so far as to make a chemical analysis—

And They Voted Yes

With practically one accord—said:

"Senreco appeals to me more than any dentifrice I have ever seen." "I cannot say too much for Senreco. It's one of the best I have used." "I can recommend Senreco as the best." "Makes the teeth gleam and is free from injurious ingredients, including particles and grit." "I am indeed glad to get a tooth paste that does the work." "Congratulations on formulating a dentifrice that gives one a new idea of mouth cleanliness, etc." (These quotations are from the dentists' reports. Originals on file at our office.)

RHEUMATISM

Physicians Believe a Genuine Remedy for the Disease Has Been Found.

Rheumatism, the wonderful rheumatism remedy sold by A. A. Clarke and all druggists gives quick relief and more lasting relief than other remedies costing many times as much.

Rheumatism causes the deadly poisonous secretions into the blood and kidney from which they are quickly thrown off in a natural, healthy way.
Read what a reputable physician says about Rheumatism: "I have made a most careful investigation of the various remedies employed in the manufacture of Rheumatism, and I heartily recommend it as a remedy for all forms of rheumatism. I find it generally employed in the treatment of rheumatism, and altogether difficult in composition from the remedies usually prescribed."—Dr. Lyons.

This should give any sufferer from rheumatism confidence to try Rheumatism.—Ad.

PETEY DINK—It Would Have Been Shooting a Baby.

By C. A. Volght

1917?

by Edwin Balmer

Copyright, 1916, by the Chicago Tribune

The sound of marching men brought them all about, gazing back toward the station, and a column of blue-jackets descended the stairs from the street and streamed out to the cars. They were just active, like, strong young men, Jim saw—they were little older than boys most of them. But as these boys marched by in order together, with easy, swinging step, heads up and hands at their sides, Jim warmed with his blood beating through him. They were wanted at Washington or at the seacoast! At this hour of the country's danger the nation had called upon them for protection, and at the call they were responding, each boy disciplined and ready, each trained to do what his country now called him to do.

Jim turned at a touch on his shoulder. Bob drew him aside and introduced—"Mr. Sbert of the secret service"—a stocky, quiet, direct eyed man of about forty.

"Mr. Wendell has told me what you have done tonight and has given me the evidence which you obtained," Sbert said. "If you are questioned or connected in any way with tonight's death I will know it and will advise or assist you."

Sbert moved off. The forward coaches were filled with blue-jackets. The officers who had accompanied them came back and shook hands with Wendell. The train conductor addressed the officer in command. "You are ready, sir?"

"All ready."

Bob extended his hand to Jim. "It was a mighty good thing, as it turned out, that you insisted on running the car in. Sbert is much pleased with what we have done. He thinks it was just what he needed."

Jim finished. Sbert had spoken to him as one who might require aid, not as one able to give aid to those working for the nation in this emergency. Bob was giving him credit for having done something which he had not been expected to do. "I've told Nellie that I believe it's best if she stays in Elgin for awhile anyway," Bob went on. "I know I don't have to ask you to look out for her for me. Goodbye, Jim."

"Goodbye," Jim replied, but held to Bob's hand. "I'm going back to Elgin, but I'm not going to stay there."

"You mean—"

The train was about to start, and Jim spoke quickly. "Was that gun you used on the road yours or the government's?"

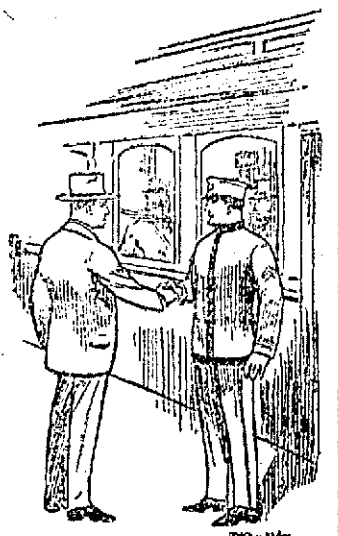

"Mine," said Bob, surprised. "Then give it to me! Never mind why I want it. Give it to me!"

He seized it and the cartridges as Bob pulled them from his pocket. Wendell looked for the platform as the train and caught it. The train moved from the station, the baggage porters and switchmen and the station attendants all standing and staring at the crowded cars left the sheds. Then a porter took the placard from the train stand which had been at the rear of the train. "Special to Washington and Newport News."

How many more signs must be printed to stand at the rear of trains and guide marching men before the war, which was begun that night, would be won?

Jim jumped into his car and turned it toward the business center of the city. The address upon the letterhead which Bob had found on Inga's body was that of a well known business block; the office was 312; that meant it was on the third floor. It was the name and address which Bob had started for that office to seize its contents.

Here and there all night restaurants were open; other lighted windows proclaimed hotels or newspaper offices, but the rest of the business district was black, except for the street lamps, and particularly black was the great building which—according to the evidence of Inga's body—housed the headquarters of the recent spies. A little beyond this building, however, a motorcar—a private touring machine, not a taxicab—was standing at the curb; a man was waiting in the driving seat and the engine was running. Jim saw a light in a window on the third floor—a light from a light within, not a reflection from the lights in the streets. He looked about the street, but except for the man waiting in the taxicab car no one was in sight; the man had turned to his seat and was watching Jim as he went and tried the front door of the building. The door was locked and the man went around to the alley.

"There was a small door there, which was promptly opened by a janitor."

asked him.

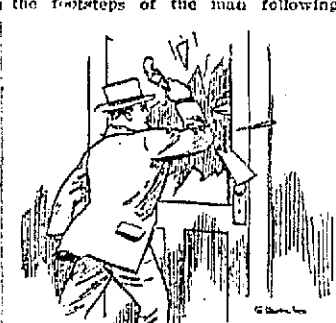

"What office are you connected with, sir?"

"B. D. Marlett, the insurance office on the third floor."

The man stepped back. The reply seemed to be exactly what he expected. "Mr. Marlett's up there now. You know the way, sir?"

Jim stepped in, his blood beating hot through him. A light, probably turned on for Marlett, was burning over an iron stairway which went up beside the elevator shaft. Jim ascended slowly and cautiously, but in the silent marble walled building his footsteps echoed again and again. He stopped at the landing, and, taking his revolver from his pocket, he felt of the backs of the door to make certain that all chambers were loaded. He gained the second floor. He found in the dim glow of a single electric bulb the stairway to the third and began to ascend. Halting at the landing and listening, he made out no sound from the floor above, but from below he heard the soft voices and now the noise of some one hastily ascending the stairs. One of the men below was the janitor; the other, evidently, the man for whom the janitor had mistaken Jim, the one whom Marlett had expected to follow him into the building. That man knew that some one just ahead of him had asked for Marlett's office.

Jim gained the third floor and slipped down the hall to the right. It was all dark about him now, as the light on the stairs was around the corner, but the office from which the light of light had showed to the street must be close ahead. Jim, holding his revolver ready in his right hand, felt the office doors with his left. They were of the ordinary type, with ground glass in the upper half just above the lock. As he moved along, with the sound of the footsteps of the man following closer each moment, he formed his plan swiftly. There was no time for him to delay or to get help; if anything was to be done there it must be done at once and by him alone. Marlett's coming to the office at that time in the morning could mean only one of two things—either the chief of the recent spies knew that his office was suspected and he had come to remove or destroy all evidence concealed there, or at the moment in which America was arousing to war he had come there to set in motion some prepared plot against the security of the country.

CHAPTER V.

The House of Secret Agents.

JIM'S heart beat so that the blood in his throat seemed choking him. His hands were cold and wet, but steady. There was no light at all inside the door before him, but he had halted, and now he had come to an office where some one was working. There was the barest sound of movement and a low light. Some closely shaded desk light probably gave the faintest glimmer through the front pane of the door. Jim no sooner discerned this than his finger tried the doorknob. Finding the door locked, he struck instantly with the butt of the revolver, smashing a hole through the glass. He struck again, smashing the hole larger, and thrust his arm in, turned the knob on the inside, jerked his arm out, kicked the door open and sprang within and crouched with revolver ready.

Between his first smash of the glass and before he made the hole through the light had glowed through on his hand. If he had not been sure of that he now might have believed he had broken into an empty room. It was absolutely black and silent. Curtains pulled close over the windows shut out all but a feeble reflection of light from the street and there was no sound of any sort in the room or in the building. The noise of footsteps following up the stairs had ceased. The man in the hall either had halted at hearing the attack on the door or else was creeping, as Jim himself had crept, silently down the corridor.

A flash of flame almost in his face—so close that the powder stung on his cheeks and the flames choked him—rang him back off his balance. He fired back—that is, his finger jerked on the trigger and his revolver roared after the other, but the bullet could have found no mark. He recovered himself, crouched, fired again—blindly or only in the general direction of the flame which had burst at him. The flash of the other revolver spurted again, but it did not seem him so much this time. It was something else striking him a second or so after the shot—something which brushed and stupefied him with its first shock, with its next knocked him down, and with its third a blank.

He was lying face downward upon some sort of a leather couch when he became conscious again. There was a tremendous pain in his head, and when he tried to move his hands he discovered that they were tied together and bound to his body. These discoveries brought him sufficient memory of the struggle and gave him such realization of his present condition that he made no move after the first, which told him that he was carefully bound. He made no outcry, and after his first look at the black leather couch upon which he lay he closed his eyes again and lay as quietly as possible.

The smell of strong tobacco, of the sort smoked in a pipe, was the first sensation which gave him knowledge of his surroundings. The smoke was thicker at one moment than at another and thus told Jim that the smoker was then in the room. He was sitting—or standing—quite still, for, though Jim listened intently, he heard no sound but the puff at the pipe. The denseness of the smoke indicated that the room was small, and as Jim ventured to peer above the edge of the couch he discovered that to be the fact.

Before he observed these details Jim had supposed that he was a prisoner in the office into which he had broken or elsewhere in the office building—perhaps in some basement room. Now he recognized that he must have been taken when unconscious to some house of the better sort.

The pipe smoker, who appeared to be acting as a guard, sat at the head of the couch so close that the smoke from his pipe blew hot against Jim's cheek, but he was so placed that Jim could not see him without moving. Jim continued careful not to betray consciousness, and the next minute he was rewarded for his caution. A step approached the door, and as the door opened the smoker stood up. A man—plainly the superior of the guard—entered the room and stopped beside the couch.

"He's not conscious yet?" he said impatiently to the guard, who now had ceased to smoke.

"No, sir; not a move yet," the guard replied with deference.

The "sir" put his hand upon Jim's shoulder. It was a strong, firm hand and gripped with determination. It shook Jim back and forth and then let go. Jim had let himself lie as limply as possible and had made no resistance to the shaking.

"You must try again to revive him, Bole," the "sir" directed. "If whiskey and water do not bring him about do anything else."

"Yes, sir."

"Try at once. He"—this did not refer to Jim; it plainly referred to some one in authority over the "sir" and whose wishes were to be obeyed—"must know within an hour, certainly, how he"—this referred to Jim—"learned."

The "sir" went out and shut the door behind him. Bole again puffed at his pipe, but he also poured water into a glass. He added liquor and carried the glass to the couch. Jim still lay as he was left, on his side. He managed yet to feign stupor, though the blood was pounding within his brain and thumping in his neck. He had just received the answer to the question which had bewildered him since he had regained his senses. He had just heard the explanation of the puzzle as to why he had not been shot after the fight in the office and left there.

The reason that the spies had taken him prisoner and carried him away was that he had shown that he had learned certain of their secrets. If they had killed him or left him in the office building their act would have opened only to direct more attention toward that office, and they would have lost all opportunity to trace through him the location of the fault in their chain of secret agents. With Jim a prisoner and in their power they could force from him—or apparently they were determined to try to force from him—what he knew about them and how he learned it, so that they might mend their chain where it was broken or at least take precautions against the break bringing greater danger to them. Till they could discover where the fault was it was plain that they must move with extreme caution and at too great risk.

Jim's teeth clenched and his hands strained as he recognized this situation. Bole brought to his lips the glass of whiskey and water. He forced a little down Jim's throat and dashed more over his face.

Jim succeeded in still feigning stupor. Bole rolled him over on his face and undid the cords which bound his arms, seizing Jim's wrists and moving the arms to sit Jim into life.

The door of the room was shut tight, and as no sound came from other parts of the house Jim felt assured that a little noise would send no alarm to other rooms. As Bole rolled him over with arms loosed, he still lay limp; then, as Bole bent over him, Jim caught a loop of the rope which had bound him and threw it over Bole's neck. The man leaped back in his first start of surprise and so drew the loop tight. He did not cry out at once, and as Jim leaped upon him and drew the cord tighter and tighter about the man's neck Bole now could not cry out. With his breath stopped he did not fight effectively. He struggled uselessly to seize the man with his fingers and tear it from his neck till, with mouth gasping open and bulging eyes shut, he crumpled.

Jim pushed him down on the couch and swiftly searched his pockets, finding first a revolver. In another pocket was a large handkerchief. Jim stuffed this cloth quickly into Bole's mouth, and, securing it there, he loosed the man about the neck. Bole's breath returned in loud, rasping snores. There was no way to stop the snoring but to remove the gag. Jim dared not do that. He worked swiftly, binding Bole as he had been bound and, in addition, securing him to the couch. The man was conscious again, though weak and breathing hard. Jim delayed over him no longer. He switched on the light, stepped to the window, pulled back the shade and peered out.

A man suddenly moved out into the moonlight as Jim was putting his hand to the window—a young, active man, alert and watchful. Some noise in the alley seemed to have attracted his attention, for he stepped quickly to the gate and before opening it drew a revolver and held it ready. Another man appeared from the other side of the house and joined the first. Together they investigated the alley, closed the gate and withdrew to the seclusion of the shadow.

Jim moved away from the window. Opportunity to escape through the house could not be worse than the risk of attempting flight through that window. He felt his way to the door without again turning on the light. He stood and listened there, opened the door a crack and peered into a passageway decorated, dimly lighted, hallway with polished hardwood floor and with a rich oriental rug down the middle.

Though light glowed in from the hall to show Jim that he was in the dining room—a large room with heavy, fashionable furniture. The rug upon which he stepped was soft and thick. There was another door at the other end, and as Jim crept cautiously toward this he heard voices. They were the voices of women as well as men, speaking in quiet, guarded tones. In the air was the odor of cigarettes and cigar smoke.

A girl's voice suddenly rose in a reckless, excited exclamation which Jim could not make out, but at which a man laughed. Another with a deep, heavy voice—it was not the voice of the "sir" who had visited the rear room—rebuked the girl, and there was silence. Jim gained the front of the dining room. Velvet hangings half covered the doorway, which opened into a front hall. Directly across this hall was another room, lighted and evidently much larger than the dining room—a salon with delicate paper and pretty gilded chandeliers and wall lights, with graceful table and chairs and with a grand piano of a corresponding style. Brocade curtains were drawn close over the windows, and at the larger table near the center of the room and also at a smaller table at the side men and women were at work.

There was a heap of papers upon one end of the larger table, and a tall man, who stood with his back to the door, sorted over this pile, put some sheets aside and passed others along the table, giving a rapid direction with each. In some cases the direction was brief—only a word or two—in other instances it was longer, and twice while Jim watched the tall man himself bent and wrote upon the papers which he took from the pile.

Jim could see as the sheets were held up that they already bore writing. There was no possible question of the nature of the work going on. Under the direction of the tall man at the larger table the others were preparing letters of the sort found on Inga's body. The papers in the pile which the tall man was sorting were undoubtedly just the ordinary form letters of life insurance solicitation, and the great majority of them would remain no more than that. They would be addressed to persons who had no connection with the plots of the recent agents, and they would be offered life insurance in the regular manner if they applied for it at Marlett's office. The letters which the tall man passed down the table unquestionably looked the same as the others, but they were addressed, to spies, and at the tall man's direction orders were being written in invisible fluid between the typewritten lines, orders which the spies would develop by some chemical.

Jim crouched and crept closer, forgetting his impulse merely to attempt escape. If he could cause the capture of these in the rooms across the hall he would have the chief of the recent spies there, together with the lists of the agents and designation of the work each was ordered to do. The letters between the lines of which the secret instructions now were being written, evidently had been at Marlett's office when he had learned after midnight of developments which made it imperative for him to issue new orders, so Marlett had gone to his office and directed another to meet him there. When Jim had surprised them they had overpowered him and brought him unconscious to this house, where they had impressed the family to the work required.

And more than the family of this house were at work. Two men besides the tall man at the end were writing at the larger table. Three women assisted them. At the smaller table were a young man and two girls. These three apparently had spent the earlier hours of the night at a dance or some formal entertainment. The young man was in evening clothes, and both the girls were decoletes. One of these girls faced the door, and as she looked up and laughed at some remark of the young man's Jim stared. He knew that girl. He knew her not as an acquaintance, but as one whose picture often appeared in papers accompanying accounts of social affairs, one who was pointed out at the opera or among the spectators at a polo or tennis match. Where he had seen her Jim could not remember, but that he had seen her under some such conditions and that she was one of the popular debutantes of the year before he was certain.
